

The Approach ergo specialists helps employers learn how to reduce the chances of having an occupational disease claim filed due to repetitive motion or stress. You can reduce the chance of your employees developing an occupational disease condition by making sure they have access to the proper tools, education, and body mechanics to reduce overuse-type injuries. The Approach specialists can visit your location to advise on work-station setup, provide in-depth training, or to train your staff in the basics of ergonomics.

Complimentary Ergonomic Services

Industry-Specific Ergonomics Plans

We can develop or update industry-specific ergonomics plans for any employer striving to reduce work-related musculoskeletal disorders (WSMD).

Training/Train-the-Trainer

We provide in-depth training about body mechanics and ways to keep good practices in place. We can train your staff to provide these trainings in the future as a refresh or when new staff are hired.

Ergonomic Assessment

We come to your location to see how things are set-up, then suggest improvements and help you get them up and running.

On-site ergonomics assessments on an as needed basis to assist with the response to individual employee ergonomic issues, assess caution zone jobs (CZJ) and/or provide general facility overviews.
